Yahia sabe que, pese a ser el médico más respetado e influyente en la Granada de 1492, debe tener cuidado con lo que hace ahora que los Reyes Católicos son sus nuevos soberanos. Sobre el papel, las Capitulaciones de Santa Fe garantizan que los naturales de Granada podrán seguir con su fe y sus costumbres, pero la realidad en las calles granadinas no es tan sencilla. Muchos, como el propio Yahia, se han convertido al cristianismo por precaución -aunque siguen practicando el islam en la intimidad familiar-; pero otros se resisten y luchan por mantener sus tradiciones. La convivencia pacífica y respetuosa entre musulmanes y cristianos impulsada por el arzobispo fray Hernando de Talavera se ve frustrada por la llegada a la ciudad del cardenal Cisneros, cuyos métodos provocan que la sangre llegue a correr por las calles de Granada. A lo largo de más de un siglo, esta novela cuajada de personajes reales narra las venturas y desventuras de los moriscos, desde su origen hasta su final. El prodigioso hallazgo de los libros de plomo del Sacromonte involucrará a Yahia y a sus descendientes en una aventura generacional, que llevará a Alonso de Luna, tataranieto de Yahia, desde Granada a Estambul, pasando por diferentes países europeos, con el fin de interpretar y preservar esa herencia sagrada que suponía un mejor entendimiento entre musulmanes y cristianos. Fernando Barrejón, a través de un exquisito uso del lenguaje y de una recreación fiel y seductora del contexto histórico, nos traslada y nos hace partícipes de un apasionante y decisivo capítulo de nuestra Historia. Visual, sembrada de detalles y descripciones, el autor nos ayuda a imaginar una época en la que la convivencia y la paz eran conceptos frágiles.
