This helpful how-to manual provides the know-how librarians need to plan and conduct a parent/child workshop in the library -- and develop a useful parenting collection that child and family-related agencies will take advantage of. Learn all the basics for designing a program that will meet the library's particular needs, from creating the right setting to a list of recommended materials, examples of forms, figuring out staffing needs and roles, program structure, and an overview of costs. As an added bonus, appendixes include support collections, a distributors' directory, and a bibliography.
